

Craig Degenfelder
Executive Director – Gas Strategy
Gas Engineering & Supply
Consumers Energy

Craig Degenfelder has 24 years of experience in the construction and utilities industry, including over 9 years with Consumers Energy, where he currently serves as the executive director of gas strategy. In this role, he is responsible for the company's long-term investment planning for the gas system.

Craig started his career in the electrical trade as an IBEW apprentice and then quickly advanced from journeyman to general foreman/superintendent, estimator, and project manager. He previously served as the executive vice president for a large electrical contractor in Southern California where he was responsible for operations, estimating, business development, and strategic planning for the company.

Craig holds an associate's degree in business administration from Oakland Community College, a bachelor's in construction management from Lawrence Technological University, a master's certificate in project management from George Washington University, and an MBA from Purdue University. He is also a certified project management professional (PMP) and holds a master electrician's license in the state of Michigan.
